Getting Along Finely.

Mr. Andrew Strickland, one of the crew of sch. Fannie E. Prescott, who recently ran a fish fork into his right foot while taking out fish at T wharf, Boston, last week, and was taken to the Chelsea marine hospital, is getting along well and will be out in a few days. In previous reports, Strickland's name was incorrectly given as FEW FISH AT BOSTON.

So New Haddock Quickly Jumped to $7 Per Hundred Weight.

Owing to the recent blowy weather, fish are scarce at T wharf, Boston, today, and although the buyers shied at off shore cod, they took a few shore fish at $3 per hundred weight and went after new haddock with a rush, bidding them up to $7. Smekers, from off shore fares, went for $2.

The shore boats arrivals only numbered three and did not have a decent sized handful altogether. Pollock caught the dealers' fancy to the extent of $1.50, just double what they had paid for the few they took in the day before.

Part of the market fleet are out or the grounds today, going out during the night, but they may not have a chance to set. About half of the fleet are still in port today, the skippers evidently not liking the looks of the weather.

GLOUCESTER'S FUTURE

United Effort Needed To Improve Fishing Industry.

Vistakes of Previous Years Should Be Forgotten.

For the Times.

Messrs. Editors:-In my walks around the water front of the city the past week, I was surprised to see the dullness that exists at this section of the city. Wharves are idle that once were alive with business. Ien years ago, Gloucester had what was supposed to be the largest and finest fleet of vessels on the coast; there was plenty of work for the la-borers, and business on the water front had a successful look, but today I find just the reverse.

What has brought about this state of affairs? Are we going backward, or are we satisfied with the business that we have here and do not want any more?

Dec. 3.

The once large firms that were located at Rocky Neck and the eastern part of the city have ceased to exist, their fleets of vessels have been disposed of, and there is practically no businsss done today where there was a good business not later than ten years ago.

There must be some cause or causes for this decline.

I am informed that the number of fishing vessels are getting less each year, and our business people are not building as many vessels now as has been their custom in the past, but are disposing of quite a number of what they now own to southern ports and other ports.

On visiting the old steamboat wharf, I could hardly believe that of the seven fishing vessels tied up there not one of of the seven had for their home port, Gloucester. All of these boats hailed from Boston.

In continuing my investigation further on, even on this side of the harbor, I find more wharves idle, owners of the same either sold out or gone out of business for other reasons, and this property fast going to ruin.

Continuing to the end, I find but two

Continuing to the end, I find but two concerns engaged in the fresh fish business, whereas, ten years ago, there were five.

At the Fort, there have been a decided change in the appearance of the property. It has been improved, by the expenditure of some two or three hundled thousand dollars. Cunningham & Thompson have an enormous plant for the handling of the salt fish and smoking business, and this firm showed every sign of success. Leaving this firm's place of business and continuing on to the Butler property, I was surprised to see how it had been improved. A stone wall had been bnilt the entire length of this property, and a large building erected, this building being occupied by the Gloucester Fresh Fish Company.

being occupied by the Gloucester Fresh Fish Company.

It was the greatest surprise of my investigation to see that this company was still doing business, as I had heard nothing about it since the first year of its origin and I thought it had closed its doors long ago. I remember the things that were predicted for this company when the citizens (I was one of them) were asked to subscribe for the stock, as it would be a good business proposition for the city, and the good benefits we would all enjoy if this company could be organized, and could be made a paying investment.

would all enjoy if this company could be organized, and could be made a paying investment.

I was shown over the plant, and was more surprised to see the facilities it had for the handling of fresh fish, but notwithstanding these facilities, there was no business being done. In questioning my guide about the place, I was very much disappointed to learn that this company was unable to get stock to do business with, as I thought the Gloucester vessels would land some trips, if not the whole, at their home port. I was informed by my guide that business had been very dull this season, as the weather was so stormy that the vessels could not fish, and naturally with a plant the same as this, they must have stock to work with which most of the time it was impossible to obtain, no matter what price they would be willing to pay. I naturally asked why they did not have a regular supply of fish, for I could not bring myself to see how a Głoucester company with so many vessels engaged in the winter fishery could be short of fish, and as told that there were but 19 Gloucester vessels engaged in the winter fishery and all but one of these 19 vessels landed their fares at Boston.

What a change since this company was organized. For two years the whole fleet landed their fares here, and business was prosperous on the streets. I learned from my guide that the manager had last winter some three times bought trips of fish at Boston and brought them here. I admit that mistakes were made when this particular company was formed, but from what I can learn, these mistakes have been rectified and do not happen now.

It is a great mistake for the 18 vessels that Gloucester has engaged in this winter fishery happen now.

It is a great mistake for the 18 vessels that Gloucester has engaged in this winter fishery not to come in here some three or four times in the winter and give this company an opportunity to do some business. It is not a question of price, I am told, so much as not being able to purchase the goods. Some of the captains that man these 19 vessels I am well acquainted with, and I am surprised that they do not see the situation in a business way, knowing as they must, that these 19 vessels that they sail, are a very small part, of the winter fleet, as Boston has some 176 vessels and shore boats against these nine-teen.

Why hold the mistakes that were made at Why hold the mistages that were made at the start forever? Why not forget them and start anew? From my investigation of the business of this city we should all do what we can to improve it and not throw cold water on it. These captains of our vessels are we can to improve it and not throw cold water on it These captains of our vessels are intelligent men, but they are slow to grasp the situation. I am convinced that it they would give this company a chance to purchase their fares occasionally, it would mean a great deal to them and it would be a means of keeping what little trade they have now. I can see where this plant will be in the same condition as the firms at Rocky Neck. It is impossible to keep the thing going without the goods to work with.

Are the vessel owners and captains going to help, or will we see this business close forwant of support, the same as all other projects that Gioucester takes hold of, do?

In conclusion, get together, captains and vessel owners. Directors of the Fresh Fish Company, instruct your manager to interview the 18 captains and give this company a chance to purchase your fares. Do not come bound by any iron-clad agreements but come of your own free will, and if you are used right, come arain. If not, stay away, you will be justified in doing so.

Don't condemn this proposition without a trial. The cizitiens of Gloucester did their part in putting up the money, do yours in keeping it alive.

LOOKS BLUE AT BAY OF ISLANDS

Herring Still Continue Scarce and Weather Is Bad.

NO FISH YET IN SHOAL WATER.

Several Vessels Want Only Small Lots To Finish Loads.

Very little change for the better is the latest report from the herring fleet at Bay of Islands, N. F. Advices from the Gloucester fleet there say that unless the situation changes in the near future, there will be disappointment all around. Fish are exceptionallly scarce for this season of the year; one day there will be a few and the next none.

On Saturday last the signs were a little more favorable and some of the vessels did fairly well, not taking any great amount of fish, but still doing better than for many days, taking from 30 to 80 barrels. The fish were taken in deep water, and it is claimed that there is a large body outside.

A number of vessels are almost loaded and require only a small catch to complete their caroges. The recent arrivals have been schs. Elizabeth N. and William Matheson of Bucksport, Me. The weather Sunday was mild, with a light snow falling, with the wind notheast. On Saturday it blew hard from northwest.

It does not look as though all the vessels would succeed in loading salt herring cargoes unless the situation takes a very sudden change for the better, which of course is hoped of all around. Of course it is realized that the aspect may be changed any day and that nerring may strike in the Arms in abundance, but at present it must be admitted that things do not look good. There are only about six weeks more of the whole season for salt and frozen herring, and the former practically closes when frost sets in, so that at present every day counts for a great deal.

STORM AT NEWFOUNDLAND.

No Herring Craft Damaged but Ten Vessels and 17 Men Lost.

Advices received here last night from skippers at Bay of Islands, N. F., tell of a terrible gale which had raged there all day yesy and the day before. No losses cidents are reported, but the storm was the worst of the year.

A St. John's dispatch of last evening says that seventeen persons perished in the storm, ten fishing vessels going ashore most of them breaking into fragments on the rocks. The victims of the gale were members of the crews of three of these craft. The fishermen were all residents of Newfoundland, and nearly all of the drowned fishermen leave families.

PECULIAR FISH.

First of Its Kind and North Sydney and None Can Name It.

Probably the most curious fish ever landed in Cape Breton was caught by Michael Mc-Kinnon of North Sydney, C. B., Saturday morning while fishing off Low Point. The fish is five feet long, and resembles a halibut somewat. The mouth is very large and is fitted with several rows of sharp teeth. None of its kind has ever been seen there. before.

Dec. 5.

KEEL TWISTED OFF.

Sch. Georgianna Evidently Fell Off Rock on Bottom.

Lighter Philip Did Quick Job Righting and Floating.

Sch. Georiganna, which sunk in Harbor Cove Friday morning, was pumped out and floated by lighter Philip yesterday afternoon. The work was begun right after dinner and by 4.30 o'clock the craft was on an even keel and at 8 o'clock was towed over to Parkhurst's railways and hauled out for examination and repair repairs.

The craft when she bid up Thursday evening must have stopped right on top of a rock or perhaps between two rocks, for her keel for a length of 50 feet is twisted right over, so that it lays at right angles with the garboard, the big iron bolts being bent with the wood while the heavy wood is split open in many places. The garboards are started and opened up and this is where the craft

It would seem that when the tide went, the vessel beeled over and slid off the rock, twisting and doubling up the keel, and that this is when the noise and shock came that awakened all hands and made them think that the craft had been struck or blown up.

Again it may have been that when she bid up, her keel may have fitted in between two rocks, and that when she heeled over, as the tide dropped, the keel was thus twisted and the jar caused by her shifting position woke up the crew.

The trip of fish, about 20,000 pounds, were taken out yesterday afternoon and put in the hold of the lighter, and they are being landed to lay.

Mr. Thomas E. Reed, the stevedore, and owner of the Philip, took personal charge of the righting, floating and pumping out of the Georgianna, going at the job in his well known hustling manner and doing it in very quick time.

PROVINCETOWN NOTES.

About All the Trawling Fleet Are Hauled Up.

Nearly all of the schooner trawlers of Provincetown have ceased fishing operations for the season. Only sehs. Frances V. Silva. Gov. Russell and Jessie Costa are now in commission. Of the remainder, schs. Rosie Cabral and William A. Morse are hauled up at Boston piers; sch. Harvester and Joseph P. Johnson are alongside local wharves, while schs. Louisa R. Silva, Annie Perry, Nettie Franklin, Mary Santos, Louise Cabral, Philip P. Manta, Emilia Enos and Mary Silveira are moored in Provincetown harbor, to remain there until work is resumed for the season of 1909.

Capt. E. W. Smith is suffering a broken rib, result of a fall, caused by the parting of halliards on which he was hoisting aboard of sloop Nancy recently. Capt. Smith fell forcefully upon his side, striking against a hatch covering. Although he experienced work for several days. One day last week, while his sloop was entering Plymouth and he was exerting himself at some bit of work on deck, the rib, which had been cracked by the fail previously, snapped asunder, 1equiring the services of a medical man upon the craft's arrivial in port.

It is stated that, sch. Carrie F. Roberts will be stationed in Provincetown harbor as a gasolene storeship, by her owner, Mr. Nicholas A. Moran of Boston.

Rumor has it that the Consolidated freezer took in 40,000, the Fisherman 125,000 and the Provincetown cold storage 200,000 pounds of pollock last week.
